You play a major role in helping your child reach the maximum of his or her potential. Research in the area of child development shown that important learning takes place outside the formal classroom, especially for developing a love of reading and good homework habits. This means that children spend a great deal of time with their first and most important teachers – their parents, guardians, and family members. Your involvement in your child learning experience will have much to do with how well your child succeeds in school and later in life. By working together, we believe we can all help your child become the best person possible.
